POTENTIAL · NOTICE THE EVIDENCE

Gifting Audit Worksheet

Use specific examples to explore your strengths. This is a reflection exercise: its purpose is to generate useful questions and small experiments, not a fixed label.

Name: _____ Date: _____

1. What do people repeatedly ask me to help with?

Describe two recent situations. What did you do, and what changed?

2. Where have I produced a useful result?

Name the task, the result, and evidence someone else could observe.

3. Which worthwhile activities hold my attention?

Distinguish an activity you enjoy from an ability you have practised. Where do they overlap?

4. What feedback has appeared more than once?

Record the words used and the examples behind them, including a useful challenge.

Use examples from work, home, study, community service or creative practice. You can leave any question unanswered.

POTENTIAL · TEST A WORKING HYPOTHESIS

From evidence to action

5. Under which conditions do I contribute well?

Consider the people, setting, preparation and support that help your strengths show up.

6. What skill or habit needs development?

Choose one limitation that affects your contribution and a realistic way to practise.

Ask for specific peer feedback

Invite two or three people who have seen you act. Ask: “When have you seen me contribute well? What did I do? What should I develop next?”

Person / context	Observed strength + example	Development suggestion

My two-week experiment

Working strength: _____

Person or need I will serve: _____

Small task and date: _____

Evidence I will collect: _____

Feedback partner / review date: _____

Look for patterns across examples. Revise your interpretation when new evidence appears. Keep completed reflections private; share only what you choose.